

Constantinos Papantoniou

Constantinos Papantoniou, Ph.D (cand.), GISP, MBA, Ms, Bs, CBE, CHD is a PhD student in the Center for Information Systems and Technology at Claremont Graduate University (CGU). Mr. Papantoniou established, and is the Senior Technical Lead of, the Geospatial Blockchain engagements at ESRI. His main research focus area is in Geographic Information System and Blockchain technologies where he is specifically interested in spatial information system implementation and integration, and the use of new emerging technologies in Geographic Information Systems.

Brian N. Hilton

Brian N. Hilton, Ph.D., is a Clinical Full Professor in the Center for Information Systems and Technology at Claremont Graduate University (CGU). Dr. Hilton established, and is the Director of, the Advanced GIS Lab at CGU. His main research focus area is in Geographic Information System technologies where he is specifically interested in spatial information system development, the use of emerging technologies in information system development, and the processes related to the use of spatial analytics to support decision-making.